Mastering the MANUSCRIPT is a hybrid coaching and consulting writer's program formulated and uniquely designed by a six-time writer and self-publisher. The program takes writers through an eight-ten week intensive program that helps writers discover and map out their book's final concept and manuscript structure. The program was created to assist aspiring and new writers struggling to master their book's manuscript. The coaching aspect of the program focuses on the writer strategically unlocking the answers to their success through in-depth and intentional conversation and goal setting. As a writing consultant, at the end of each session, writers are given a writing development activity that will provide the writer with the tools needed to develop a clear structure and map for completing the targeted book's manuscript. By the end of the program, writers will have a practical and functional writing plan for completing the book's manuscript. Most new and struggling writers struggle to complete their manuscripts due to commitment and structure issues. This program seeks to directly alleviate those barriers to the writing process —helping authors reach their goal of becoming a published author!
